Notes:

“Competition is really warfare, and the only competitor I have is myself. Competition is a Pandora’s box that releases a number of negative feelings toward others. This must be discouraged. But I must encourage negative feelings toward my own pride, laziness, self-will, love of praise, and unwillingness to put myself out for others. I must avoid the religion of comparison, for God’s plan for me is as individual and distinctive as the formation of a snowflake. A true disciple compares himself with himself and he is able to say, ‘The Lord has enabled me to grow in a particular discipline.’” —Glyn Evans
